At the Kids Day America 18 event, the WTEAC used the interactive Enviroscape to teach children about non-point source pollution.

Terrence, Mary, and Sean, ages 6, (the Kean triplets) created the rain simulation and observed the pollution entering into the waterways. Their dad, Assemblyman Sean Kean also viewed the demonstration.

The WTEAC dispensed Clean Communities shirts and bags with children's play items to attendees, which were donated by Public Works. In addition, the WTEAC distributed environmental literature.
